

Cameron goes

Monday, 12 September 2016

Some months before the referendum media contacts muttered about the False Allegations Industry having Cameron and Osborne in their sights.

Since it is so easy now to destroy lives and careers with totally fake historical claims, since politicians were too terrified to do anything about police behaviour and you will be believed, since real sex scandals were hard to find (Keith Vaz) to provide prurient media good stories, since the judicial system is broken and men can be convicted of crimes that never took place (David Bryant)... it is so easy for unscrupulous rivals to damage existing cabinet ministers.

Good heavens, even dead Prime Ministers have joined Dead DJs in the roll call. But Theresa May should not turn a blind eye either. Husbands are the best bullseyes of all.