

The end of the world is nigh

Tuesday, 07 October 2014

I've been saying it for 20 years - the human species is heading mindlessly for the cliff edge.

This Ebola situation looks like the beginning of the end. I'd be happier if money and help had been going there for months for the good reason - to stop people dying. It's unpleasant to witness aid get sent out now only because it might affect us.

Just as I've gone on for ages about opening and scrapping all borders. As we've seen by the Internet, the human race is global. We should start behaving that way. Nationalism is often stupidly selfish.
