

British Judicial System collapsing

Saturday, 07 May 2016

427 million quid needed by the Ministry of Justice to deal with these false allegations (a few of which are true and quite a few of which are partly true); 7500 extra sitting days needed last year for the courts; Mark Fenhalls QC - chairman of the Criminal Bar Association in despair (he describes the criminal justice system as playing catchup - some of us would say broken). What is going on? I shall tell you - media promotion is as successful as ever; plug a product hard and well and it will sell.
